Right At Home

These paintings are mostly views from our new home in the Capertee Valley.

Having lived without horses for over 30 years, I dreamed of one day being able to talk to them from my kitchen window as I had done from my grandparent's house when I was a child. Last January I found just the wild horse who needed a home and so the search for a rural space began.

After much deliberation over leaving our well connected lives atop the Blue Mountains, we decided to take the plunge to the valley, with views all around to our beloved blue and orange splashed mountains.

The challenges of off grid living, the need to paint with available light and a whole new change of priorities and focus forced a fresh perspective for these works. Having spent many years perched on the edges of cliff tops and painting what lay below, I now look upwards at the cliffs all around.

It took some getting used to but I have absolutely fallen in love with our place and am discovering treasures to paint every day. We arrived at the end of a wet spring with the paddocks covered in wildflowers and singing with frogs. The long summer days ended in spectacular glowing sunsets and now the autumn grasses are blanketing the soil all around.

I look forward to discovering the jewels of each season and trying to find the colours and brushstrokes that can do them justice for many years to come.
